

At Young Writers' Camp you will...

- have time to write about topics that matter to you
- try out new writing techniques
- learn from other writers
- get feedback on how to improve your writing
- share your writing with others
- publish pieces in a camp anthology

The Fox Valley Writing Project (University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh) is dedicated to the ongoing improvement of writing skills and instruction. For over 25 years the Project has trained educators to excel as teachers of writing. All summer writing camp instructors have participated in the Fox Valley Writing Project.

Staff Notes

Michelle Draves is a teacher of third graders at Clay Lamberton Elementary School in Berlin. Her passion for literacy led her to pursue a master's degree in reading, and she is actively involved in the Fox Valley Writing Project. This summer marks her fourth year as director of the Berlin Young Writers' Camp. She is inspired by the brilliance of young authors and looks forward to working with a talented group of writers this summer.
