

Summer Ethics Fellowship in Journalism

“So rarely do working journalists step back and debate the ethical consequences of their decisions. FASPE has made me not only a better reporter, but also a more thoughtful person.”

— RACHEL GROSS, ASSOCIATE WEB EDITOR, SMITHSONIAN.COM

FASPE Journalism (Fellowships at Auschwitz for the Study of Professional Ethics in Journalism) is a fully-funded two-week summer program that uses the conduct of journalists in Nazi Germany as a launching point for an intensive study of contemporary journalism ethics. FASPE Journalism is predicated upon the power of place. Fellows visit Auschwitz and other sites in Germany and Poland where they consider how to apply the lessons of history to journalism's ethical challenges.

In 2021 the program will take place from May 21 – June 4. All program costs are covered, including round-trip travel from New York to Europe, European travel, lodging, and food. FASPE Journalism Fellows travel and share some seminars with Fellows in the FASPE Business and Law programs.

FASPE Journalism applicants must be interested in journalism as a career and fit into one of the following two categories: 1) be enrolled in a graduate program of any kind and planning to work as a journalist; or 2) be working as a journalist with an undergraduate degree in any field received between May 2015 and May 2020 or a graduate degree in any field received between May 2019 and January 2021.
